State Redistricting committee meets, doesn't adopt new map

Billy Hesterman - Daily Herald | Posted: Saturday, October 8, 2011 12:30 am

SALT LAKE CITY -- Utah's Legislative Redistricting Committee is no closer to adopting a new map than it was on Tuesday, after holding another committee meeting on Friday morning.

The committee gathered once again at the state Capitol building to see if there was a new map for Utah's four U.S. House districts that could gain enough support to break the logjam that exists between the state House and Senate, but the committee adjourned the meeting without adopting a new proposal.

"I think we probably will need one more meeting. I don't know if we are going to get any more motions," said Sen. Ralph Okerlund, R-Monroe, Senate chairman of the committee.

Okerlund said that the committee -- made up of 15 Republican and four Democratic lawmakers -- had approved a map already, and that map had received approval from the full body of the Senate.

Okerlund said the next move on any kind of a map should come from the House.

"What we have said is we believe that this is a good map. We believe there are four good districts there. If you have some better ideas send them back to us in the form of a substitute, but we haven't gotten to that point yet," Okerlund said. "We will see what the House hands back to us."

The committee adopted the map at the end of September and the Senate gave its approval to the plan on Monday.

The map has been sitting in the House waiting for a chance to be debated on the floor, but House Republicans are holding up the map as they are still debating among themselves whether to amend it or create a new one.

"There are some very high emotions, there is a lot of stress in this process," House Speaker Becky Lockhart, R-Provo, said. "We are listening to a lot of different people -- we are listening to our constituents, we are listening to each other. We needed some time in there to work all of that out."

While the House GOP is working to figure things out, the Redistricting Committee heard from the public in its meeting, the majority of who spoke in favor of two maps drawn by two of the Democrats on the committee.

One map, drawn by Sen. Ben McAdams, D-Salt Lake City, had already been rejected by the committee before and had no action taken on it during the meeting on Friday. The other was drawn by Rep. Brad King, D-Salt Lake City, which also was presented to the committee but was not put up for a vote from the committee.

A concern that was brought forward to the committee during Friday's meeting was if lawmakers were using partisan data to draw maps that favored one political party over another during the redistricting process. Lawmakers admitted that some legislators, both Republicans and Democrats, were looking at such data, but made it clear that the members of the committee were not using that information to draw their maps.

"My concern is that there was an accusation that the official legislative committee was looking at that information to draw the maps and we clearly are not. We made that very clear at the beginning of the process," Lockhart said.

Lawmakers are due back on Capitol Hill on Oct. 17 to continue the special session to redraw the lines for Utah's congressional districts, but that doesn't mean the maps will be finalized then. The Utah Constitution gives the Legislature 30 calendar days to do its work in a special session. The session began on Oct. 3.

Democrats call for GOP to open meetings on redistricting

Billy Hesterman - Daily Herald | Posted: Monday, October 10, 2011 12:50 am

Utah Democrats are calling on Republican lawmakers to open the doors to their discussions about how the boundary lines should be drawn for Utah's congressional districts.

While the Legislature itself has held almost 30 public meetings on the matter, 17 of which were held in various locations throughout the state, final decisions on the maps may be decided behind the closed doors of Republican House and Senate caucus meetings.

"Let's open the closed doors!" said the chairman of the Utah Democratic Party, Jim Dabakis, in a written statement. "On behalf of all Utahns we implore that Republicans join us in letting the public watch Utah's business be conducted."

Dabakis's plea comes on the heels of the Legislature being unable to adopt the final boundary lines during a special session that started Oct. 3.

Lawmakers didn't spend much time on the floor of the House or Senate on Monday and Tuesday of the session; the House spent just less than three hours total on the floor for both days, while the Senate was on the floor for three hours and 46 minutes prior to lawmakers calling a recess until Oct. 17.

During much of the downtime during those two days Republican lawmakers were meeting in private caucuses trying to find a congressional plan that could gain enough votes to pass both bodies. GOP legislators say no map drawing was taking place in either caucus, but discussions on what lawmakers were willing to support as a final plan was being discussed. Republicans say the doors were closed because discussions were becoming heated amongst lawmakers.

"When a family has a fight they don't do it on the front lawn," said Speaker of the House Becky Lockhart, R-Provo. "Not that there was a knockdown drag out, but there was some very high emotions. There is a lot of stress in this process."

Lockhart explained that House Republicans spent most of their time discussing a congressional map that was approved by the Senate, but said House members had too many issues with the Senate-approved map to give it their final approval.

"Tuesday night it became clear that the Republicans caucus was not ready to make a decision," Lockhart said. "There was still some outstanding issues that we needed to work out."

Lockhart said those issues included the amount of urban and rural areas contained within each district and the areas where Davis County was split. Lockhart also noted that some lawmakers were concerned with the party makeup of each district.

The public has yet to hear what lawmakers think about those issues in a public forum in the form of a committee meeting, floor debate or open caucus meeting.

The public has not been ignored in the process though. The Legislature has been taking public comments on redistricting since the end of April and also created a website that allowed members of the public to draw and submit their own maps.

Public comment to the Legislature resulted in Utah County netting 14 House seats and five Senate seats in the state Legislature. Public involvement also led to Tooele city not being divided into two state Senate districts.

Lawmakers still have another week before returning to Capitol Hill to continue evaluating maps and possibly pass a final congressional map. It is expected that the Redistricting Committee will meet once during this upcoming week to continue to take public comment on proposed maps and possibly approve a second congressional map for the full Legislature to consider.

In the meantime, lawmakers may meet again in caucus meetings to discuss potential final maps. Lockhart said she would be open to having the House caucus open to the public when they discuss the maps. Lockhart did note it would take a majority of the caucus members' votes to keep the doors open on the meeting.

Redistricting squabble has GOP congressional hopefuls wondering where to line up

Published: Monday, Oct. 10, 2011 6:41 p.m. MDT

SALT LAKE CITY — Several Republicans looking to get into the 2012 congressional race don't know where to line up yet.

A standoff in the Utah Legislature over how to set new boundaries for the state's four districts has left some potential candidates in wait-and-see mode. They aren't ready to commit to a district in which they might not end up living — though that has worked for GOP 3rd District Rep. Jason Chaffetz.

"I think the maps are the deciding factor for everybody," said Rep. Chris Herrod, R-Provo, who has flirted with the idea of running for Congress.

The Redistricting Committee met last Friday — three days after the legislature's special session ground to a halt due to disagreement between majority House and Senate Republicans — but were only flooded with more maps. The committee might meet again this week. State lawmakers intend to resume the special session next Monday.

Meantime, some mostly unknown GOP candidates are poised to run against Democratic Congressman Jim Matheson in the 2nd District, regardless of how the map shakes out. Matheson is closely watching the outcome and hasn't ruled out a run for governor or switching districts.

Last week, GOP House members conceded they discussed partisan voting numbers in proposed districts during their closed caucus meetings.

Herrod made two things clear about any bid for Congress: "I'm not going to run outside my district and I'm not going to run against Jason Chaffetz."

For Herrod, that means seeking re-election in the Utah House or possibly challenging Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah. Herrod dispelled the notion of taking on state Sen. Curt Bramble, R-Provo, with whom he tangled over illegal immigration bills earlier this year.

"One thing I've learned through this whole process is to keep options open," he said.

Herrod's legislative pal, Rep. Stephen Sandstrom, R-Orem, has already committed to running for Congress. The two now live in the same Utah House district under a new legislative district map lawmakers approved last week. Neither is interested in going against the other.

"The way I'm looking at it right now, I really don't know where I'm going to run" for Congress, Sandstrom said. "I will be a candidate. Whether it's the 2nd or 4th (district), I don't know."

Sandstrom said he won't run outside the district in which he lives or go against Chaffetz, who lives in the 2nd District but represents the 3rd. Sandstrom said he would move into the 2nd or 4th districts if need be. "My wife is on board with that," he added.

Several other potential or announced candidates — Saratoga Springs Mayor Mia Love, former BYU and pro football player Jason Buck, former state lawmaker Morgan Philpot — have not committed to a district. Also, Utah Attorney General Mark Shurtleff hasn't made up his mind yet about running for Congress.

At least three candidates — Holladay political activist Cherilyn Eagar, former Air Force officer Chuck Williams of Heber and Draper airline pilot John Willoughby — are challenging Matheson regardless of where they live. Former House Speaker Rep. Dave Clark, R-Santa Clara, also is a potential 2nd District candidate.

Rep. Carl Wimmer, R-Herriman, officially launched his campaign for the 4th District seat this past weekend.

Iraq war veteran Michael Miller, a Republican, is running against GOP Rep. Rob Bishop in the 1st District. Miller lives in West Jordan, which is outside the district.

Rep. Perry,

I again urge you to carefully reconsider the whole mistaken notion that every Congressional District in Utah must contain both urban and rural voters. That is nothing more than a thinly disguised attempt to dilute Democratic voting. The key to fair Congressional Districts isn't to make them identical, but to have them fairly represent the different constituencies in the state. The urban voters of Salt Lake County are one constituency and by splitting them into three or even four different districts, you have essentially taken away their right to fair representation in Congress. This is not fair. This is not the American way. No one has seen the maps that you are rumored to be voting on tonight, but I urge you to make Utah's Congressional Districts fair for both parties and not just a way for the Republican Party to cement its power. We must again become a two-party state.

Respectfully,
John McLaughlin

Speakers at the Press Conference yesterday in the Capitol protesting redistricting:

Joshua Kanter: Founder of An Alliance for a Better Utah.

Registered Democrat, Donated $20,000+ in 2008 & 2010 election cycle. Obama, Clinton, DSCC, DNC, John Kerry, DCCC

John Hansen: Registered Democrat, SLC

Mayor Peter Corroon: (D) Salt Lake County Mayor. Called redistricting process un-American. Ran for Governor in 2010, major recipient of donations from Bruce Bastian, Howard Dean, AFL-CIO, Labor Unions, supporter of non-partisan "Fair Boundaries" initiative whose maps where drawn by Democrat operative, adviser and former UT Dem Party Exec-Director Todd Taylor.

David Irvine: Donor to Democratic Presidential candidate Wesley Clark, President Barack Obama, DNC. Attorney who has sued Utah and has received millions of dollars from Utah taxpayers in law suits.

Sen. Ross Romero: Senate Minority Leader, Candidate for SLCO Mayor, Democrat

Glenn Wright: "non-partisan Fair Boundaries" Director. Former Summit County Democrat Party Chair, caught using partisan map drawn by UT Democrat Adviser and former Executive Director

Speaker Up & Peace Up Activists; Tim DeChristopher's friends, sat on UTA TRAX to protest coal power.

MaryAnne Martindale: Exec Director of Alliance for a Better Utah, Democrat AG campaign manager, democrat operative, registered democrat. Won't release her salary or fundraising information for Alliance for a Better Utah.

No "legitimate" republicans, tea partiers, independents or non-partisan people spoke at the "non-partisan" rally.

As an observer, I find it offensive that groups would be so blatant in their partisan bias while trying to maintain the "non-partisan" citizens title.

Rep. Perry,

I urge you to vote against the biased redistricting plan that will be presented to you. It is gerrymandering of the highest order when Salt Lake County is divided into three different congressional districts. It is unfair, it is partisan, it breaks up communities of interest to dilute Democratic votes and increase Republican power. If it is passed, it will certainly, and rightfully, be challenged in court and delay any implementation in time for Utahâ€™s election season next year. If challenged in court, it will lose because it is blatantly partisan and violates the principle of election fairness. The only thing that it succeeds at is keeping Republican incumbents in power. That is the antithesis of American democracy. Vote against it.

A really bad pizza recipe

Posted: Thursday, September 22, 2011 12:03 am |

In the effort to redraw Utah's congressional districts, two of the three Utah County-based lawmakers on the commission charged with making a proposal say they like what's been dubbed the "pizza slice" plan.

That's the plan with the points of the new congressional districts in Salt Lake County.

Never mind that this play would water down Utah County's clout in Washington, without any compensating benefits. And never mind that these lawmakers are supposed to represent their local constituents.

The alternative to pizza is doughnuts. This approach would create poorly named "doughnut holes," or zones encompassing one or more of the main urban areas: Salt Lake County for sure, Utah County being the next obvious choice, and Davis County and its environs a third possibility. In some of these plans, the new Utah fourth district would cover a lot of the state's rural areas.

Note that a district comprising Utah County and a few other small chunks would focus a U.S. representative's attention squarely on this valley. You'd think that area lawmakers would naturally favor the idea.

But no. Rep. Ken Sumsion, R-American Fork, the House chair for the committee, and Rep. Francis Gibson, R-Mapleton, are favoring the pizza slice plan.

"I would like our congressional delegation unified in representing all the interests of Utah," Sumsion says. Defenders of the slice idea say it would force members of Congress to pay attention to rural areas in the four districts, since each slice would include some rural zones.

But it's easy to flip that argument over. A pizza slice plan is likely to turn rural voters into a minority in each district, thus diminishing their clout. The pizza plan could virtually disenfranchise them as representatives respond to the majority.

By contrast, if rural areas make up the bulk of a district, that district will have the undivided attention of at least one member of Congress, and the peripheral attention of all the others. The interests of rural Utah will affect the state, starting with energy development. Nobody will be ignoring those factors.

Is the pizza plan more fair? No. But Gibson frets:

"My initial leanings are that a doughnut hole plan has some negative connotation in what people say gerrymandering is," he said. "I would probably lean into dividing the state more equally."

Of course the dominant GOP wants to avoid charges of gerrymandering. The 2000 redistricting still brings the accusation that it fiddled with the boundaries too much in a vain attempt to defeat Utah's lone D.C. Democrat, Rep. Jim Matheson.

Moreover, the population of districts will be more or less equal regardless which plan is chosen, so equality is not the issue.

When the first rumors of the pizza slice plan came out of the oven, Utah Democrats derided it as blatant gerrymandering. Pizza advocates now

Dear Friends,

When we started the redistricting process, it felt like everyone was braced for impact and dreading the flashbacks to 2001 - the year the conservative Wall Street Journal singled Utah out for the worst gerrymandering in the Country. But because the public has been vocal during this process, I am pleased to say that, at least so far, 2011 looks very different!

We are near the finish line but we cannot grow complacent. The maps are not yet final and can still change, and the Congressional map hasn't been seen yet. So I urge you, in these final weeks of the redistricting process, to remind the legislature to keep our communities of interest together. You can send this message by signing the Speak Up Utah coalition petition.

Please take a moment to sign the redistricting petition and forward this email to a friend.

I'd like to take this opportunity to say thank you. As you probably remember, fair redistricting was a priority in my campaign, and I appreciate that you have kept up the pressure and the calls for a fair, open, and honest process that preserves our community of interests.

Here's where we stand:

The legislature's Redistricting Committee has adopted a school board "base" map submitted by a member of the public and, while not perfect, the base map for the state house isn't bad. The senate map is perhaps the least encouraging of the three base maps adopted so far, but even that could have been substantially worse but for the public's participation in the redistricting process.

But we're not quite finished yet. We still need your help - and your voice. Perhaps the biggest map has yet to be released - the base map for Utah's four congressional districts. Over the course of the year, we've had a great discussion about whether it's better to have a map that blends rural and urban areas (the pizza slice option), or a map that creates one or two rural districts and two or three urban districts (the doughnut hole). Public opinion has been clear - Utahns around the state feel they'd get the best representation from a doughnut hole approach. It's up to us to make sure the redistricting committee hears our voices. As I've been oft-quoted saying, we'd rather have doughnuts for breakfast than pizza for lunch!

Again, please take a moment to sign the redistricting petition and forward this email to a friend.

The redistricting special session is set for October 3, 2011, so we don't have much time. With your help, we've accomplished so much already! Together, we can all make sure our representation is fair, open, and honest. Can you take a minute tosignthe petition and forward this to a friend?

Thanks,

Peter Corroon

P.S. If you're able, please also join us on Monday, October 3 at 11:30AM for a redistricting rally at the Capitol. Bring your signs and your VOICE!

The final Congressional Redistricting proposal now before you is nothing short of cynical. It virtually disenfranchises the remaining few voters who dare to disagree with the majority and now, finally removes any incentive to even go to the polls. The majority owns 80% of our congressional delegation, 76% of the State Senate and 77% of the House. Now you are about to vote to squash what few remain out of your control, just because you can. Greed is destroying the American economy. And greed is about to destroy Utah democracy. Don't be surprised when nobody shows up to vote. What's the use?
